

The Corporate Suite Chicago-Hospitality Concept - By Jerome Cedicci & Robin Trehan
2008-02-07

The corporate suite concept has been extremely successful in the Chicago land area and it is not hard to understand why. Along with New York, London and Tokyo, Chicago is one of the busiest cities in the world.

Every day thousands of people travel to this bustling metropolis to work and play. In fact, in 2007 alone more than eleven million people traveled to Chicago on business. The city serves as a corporate hub for companies from a variety of different industries, including McDonald's, Motorola, Sara Lee and Sears. Its two airports, Midway and O'Hare, are consistently ranked among the nation's busiest and best. Chicago is truly the business hub of the Midwest.

Choosing to stay in a corporate suite while visiting the Chicago area for more than a few days makes a lot of sense to the savvy traveler. Staying at a hotel can get expensive quickly because such establishments mainly accommodate short term guests. Opting to stay at a hotel on a longer term basis doesn't make much sense financially because the nightly rate remains the same regardless of the length of stay. Nowadays, the bottom line is more important than ever. Professionals traveling to Chicago on business know that saving money on lodging is a great way to get the most out of every travel dollar.

In addition to being less expensive, corporate suites provide a homelike environment that encourages businesspeople to feel comfortable and relaxed. Most include facilities not found in traditional hotels, such as kitchens and even washers and dryers. The ability to take care of routine tasks like buying groceries or doing laundry can make a big difference to someone on a long trip. It is also a money saver, because it eliminates the need to eat each and every meal at a restaurant, and minimizes the expenses associated with having to send clothes out to be laundered or dry cleaned. The traveler spends less time worrying about the logistical concerns of an extended stay, and more time conducting the business they've come to Chicago to do. Corporate suites are specifically meant to accommodate the business traveler and they therefore feature all the modern technology needed to keep in touch while on the road, such as Internet access. It is much easier to be productive and organized when you are in an environment that has been intentionally designed with that purpose in mind. In addition, corporate suites are free of the distractions often present at traditional hotels, such as children and vacationers.

It is easy to see the many ways that corporate suites help business travelers make the most of their time in the 'Windy City'. Such suites provide the perfect environment not only for working but for relaxing as well. They are healthier for the bottom line and for the traveling employee's efficiency and state of mind. It's no wonder they're such a popular choice.
