

New Magazine to Focus on Casino Surveillance and Security

2008-05-22

Global Gaming Business magazine and World Game Protection team up for groundbreaking publication

Global Gaming Business magazine and World Game Protection, Inc., the producer of the only conference devoted to surveillance and security in the casino industry, today announced that they will joint venture in a new publication, Global Game Protection. The magazine will cover security and surveillance in the casino and resort industries. It will be published on an annual basis and timed to appear just prior to the World Game Protection Conference, scheduled for March 1-3, 2009 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

"Surveillance and security are two of most important, yet misunderstood, departments in a casino resort," says Global Gaming Business Publisher Roger Gros. "By partnering with Willy Allison and World Game Protection, we will be able to create a magazine that will rapidly become the voice of the casino surveillance and security departments."

Professionals in the security and surveillance field are highly trained and passionate about their jobs. Global Game Protection will keep these executives informed about the state-of-the-art technology, the latest news and the critical thinking that makes security and surveillance one of the most fluid areas of the facility. At the same time, Global Game Protection will foster the sense of community and purpose that permeates this profession.

"Global Game Protection is an extension of our highly successful conference and trade show, the World Game Protection Conference," says Willy Allison, the president of World Game Protection, Inc. "This magazine will be a must-read for anyone involved in the casino industry who understands the importance of safety and integrity in gaming."

Readers of Global Game Protection will be executives in the security and surveillance field, CEOs, hotel and casino managers, table game and slot executives, regulators, law enforcement officials and anyone involved in or impacted by these vital departments.
