

The Real Greek Invites Customers to Sing for Their Supper

2008-07-08

Abba Anyone?

London's largest Greek restaurant chain is offering free meze for customers who can sing an entire Abba song with no mistakes. The Real Greek has taken the Greece set musical film Mamma Mia The Movie to its heart and anyone brave enough to tackle the title song will be rewarded with free meze for the table.

Liz Williams, Managing Director of The Real Greek, said: "Being set on a stunning Greek island, Mamma Mia brings a slice of the Greek summer to London and gets us city dwellers in the mood for some good old fashioned Greek fun.

"Our traditional Greek food is designed for sharing and we want to encourage customers to relax and get into the spirit of summer. Our restaurants get very lively in the evenings - by inviting tables to sing for their supper, we hope to get everybody involved in a big Greek celebration."

The Real Greek offers a new take on traditional Greek 'street food' and has six restaurants across London (Hoxton, Clerkenwell, Bankside, Putney, Marylebone and Covent Garden) serving mezedeas, kefte and its much loved souvlaki.

The Real Greek will be offering free meze to any diner who can correctly sing 'Mamma Mia' by Abba from 10 July. The offer lasts until the end of the month, finishing on Thursday 31 July 2008.
