In-Room Connectivity Panel Offers High-Tech Entertainment Opportunities for Guests

TeleAdapt helps hotel guests at The Mirage in Las Vegas stay connected with the installation of about 3,000 MediaHub connectivity panels - one in each hotel room - as part of the resort's comprehensive room re-design project.

With the MediaHub, guests of The Mirage can fill a room with their own music, videos, pictures, games and more simply by plugging in and playing their personal media devices through the hotel room television.

'Guests of The Mirage hotel rooms are now free from using headphones and small screens during their stay, enhancing their overall in-room experience,' explains Neil Betterton, TeleAdapt Americas vice president.

The MediaHub provides hotel room guests an in-room connection point where they can seamlessly connect their laptop, iPod(R), MP3 player, iPhone(R), digital camera, PDA, camcorder, DVD player and game console to the hotel room TV and sound system.

According to the American Hotel & Lodging Association, in-room entertainment ranks number two in hotel amenity importance, just after Wi-Fi availability. 'Today's traveler is interested in more than a comfortable bed and room service,' said Betterton, 'especially when visiting the entertainment capital of the world. Our MediaHub lets each guest use the flat screen TV to play their own music, videos, pictures and more, an experience you can typically only get at home.'

Savvy hoteliers like The Mirage, looking for more ways to entice travelers, are turning to TeleAdapt to enhance their guest room technology with the stylish, compact design of their products. With TeleAdapt's MediaHub, guests at The Mirage can enjoy their personal audio and video like never before.
